HIGH TITLES.

Pacific coasters will all sympathize with John Mackey in his troubles with a blackleg son-in-law. Whatever comes of the divorce suit, Mr. Mackey's good horse sense can be depended on to handle the matter properly.

Not one marriage in a hundred, of an American girl to a titled foreigner, turns out well. In this particular instance the Prince Colonna seems to have been about the king pin of a very bad lot.

He even went so far as to lavish diamonds on abandoned women and send his wife the bills. In high Roman families, such as Colonna belonged to, this may be considered quite good form, but in the wild West it is not accepted as exactly the proper thing.

A life of wedded misery, hopes blasted, the heartless laughter of the world later on; these are the prices paid by American girls for titles.

TITLES COME HIGH.

A STAGE CUR.

Actor Coghlan who deserted his wife and grown daughter to marry Kuhna Beveridge has great ability as a theatrical star, but his action has tumbled him from the pedestal of public esteem and the one time idol of Eastern theatre goers has to play to empty benches.

This shows that the public can be depended on to draw the line at the right place on men who so shamelessly cover themselves with contempt.

In these times the public look for decency in the lives of the theatrical profession and it would be an insult to the majority of respectable people in the profession to let the conduct of Coghlan and the Beveridge woman go unrebuked. The sympathies of the public go to the outraged wife and they manifest their disapproval by letting any theatres serenely alone where he is billed to appear.

OUGHT TO BE PROSECUTED.

There is a great deal of feeling in Hope Valley against the parties who left some poisoned corn meal in a cabin by the eating of which George Keeler lost his life. The Courier says:

This sad affair will no doubt teach campers and others not to eat anything found in mountain cabins. It is the custom to leave poison scattered about for rats to devour, as they often do considerable damage and increase amazingly fast if some means are not taken to keep them down.

This is hardly the right view to take of it. It is customary to leave food in cabins in the mountains in order that lost travelers can find something to eat in a pinch.

The man who poisoned the meal could easily have left a written notice over the pan that the meal was poisoned. The rats could not have read the warning but Keeler could have done so and his life would have been spared.

The neglect of the parties who poisoned the meal to leave a warning for the benefit of travelers should subject them to some sort of legal penalty.

REVIVING THE ENTERPRISE.

Tomorrow morning the old Enterprise, a journalistic land mark in the sagebrush, will resume publication. This ought to be hailed as a lucky augury for Nevada.

It means that the Comstock is waking up from its long sleep and that the hard times that caused the paper's demise are disappearing.

It will look natural to find the old Enterprise on our table each morning. Stocks are beginning to boom; everybody is waking up for the fair and the dawn of a new era seems to be marked by this happy incident.

It seems to have been a waste of passage money sending Blount to the Islands. He had orders from Cleveland to see things a certain way and did as he was told. Looks as if Cleveland wrote his report for him before he left for Washington.

Blount seems to be in rather a bad light since Stevens reply was made public, and Cleveland is wiggling like a frog on a fish spear in the background.
